

Kitchens raise cash for skills

IN LINE with its goal of innovative thinking on healthy cooking and fine food, The Good Guys Geelong has launched a new range of stylish, state-of-the-art kitchens.

Manufactured in Australia, The Good Guys Kitchens give families new choice in customised, innovative, functional design at affordable prices.

The Good Guys Geelong proprietor Ross Parke says kitchens play a key role as a central household hub for families as well as teaching important home-cooking life-skills.

"Home really is the starting point for good food, healthy habits and positive family interaction," Ross says.

"Building upon our quality appliance range and association with Jamie's Ministry of Food, it makes sense that we're now providing one stop solutions for home kitchens."

Employing a team of professional kitchen designers, The Good Guys Kitchens offers every customer a free design consultation.

"We send a designer to visit you in the comfort of your home to discuss and design the perfect kitchen for you," Ross says.

"You'll get a sense of cost, time frame and how The Good Guys Kitchens will make it easy for you to prepare healthy and nutritious meals at home," says Ross.

The Good Guys will also make a donation from each kitchen sold to Jamie's Ministry of Food Australia who help empower people with skills to change their eating and cooking behavior.

The Good Guys Geelong is at 40-50 Fyans St, South Geelong.
